

October Half Term (and Lydia's 30th)

Part 1

Friday

Bluebell the motorhome is tucked away under the autumn leaves on The Caravan CL The Sheleig, on the outskirts of Cley next to Sea, North Norfolk. We have a sea view, we have 2 pubs within walking distance and life is feeling rather good. We arrived after a less than smooth journey- making the silly mistake of relying on google maps to get here and ignoring the roadmap. We squeezed down some tiny roads in a "sat nav effort" to save a couple of mins, but seem to have gained a couple of extra wear and tear scratches. We vow to consult the road map next time...!

✖ The site is nice- on a slight grassy slope however luckily the owner didn't mind us tearing up his grass to get onto our pitch! We have a slight sea view and it's wonderfully quiet. After a quick soup lunch (I made a pumpkin soup earlier in the week-yum) we got our walking boots on and set about on a ~~4.5~~ 6.6 mile walk.

The walk took us mainly on quiet lanes to Glandford and across its impressive ford, across Wiveton Down and into Wiveton where we had our first refreshment stop in The Wiveton Bell in front of the roaring log fire. I managed to polish off ~~most~~ all of the Liquorice Allsorts on the bar tables!

We walked across the 13th Century medieval bridge into Newgate on the outskirts of Cley, where there was another inviting pub, The 3 Swallows, it seemed rude not to pop in for “one for the road”. It was a short journey back to the campsite and we surprised to realise we had actually walked 6.5 miles.

Since getting back, we've given my new DAB radio a whirl, a present for my birthday, and currently are waiting for my homemade chicken and pumpkin pie to finish cooking in the oven. Not a bad way at all to spend the last night of my twenties!!!

Saturday

Its my 30th birthday!!!!!!

I've had a lovely chill and been thoroughly spoilt!! Keefy's cooked me a fry up and tonight he's taking me for my first Michelin star meal, at nearby Morston Hall!

Excited!
